

Business Standard

The dawn of a new soundscape

India's first multisensory and interactive music museum will give you reasons to revisit the place

Nikita Puri February 27, 2016 Last Updated at 00:12 IST

An unorthodox concrete structure stands sprawled out in an area of two acres in south Bengaluru. This three-tier structure opens into an open area which, save for the manicured grass and dancing shadows of swaying branches, lies bare, much like the concrete building it leads up to. Yet, over almost a period of five years, this space has built up the anticipation of residents and visitors. After all, the results of a survey done then clearly stated that the residents would whole-heartedly back a centre for music. They'll have their wish soon with the Indian Music Experience (IME) ...